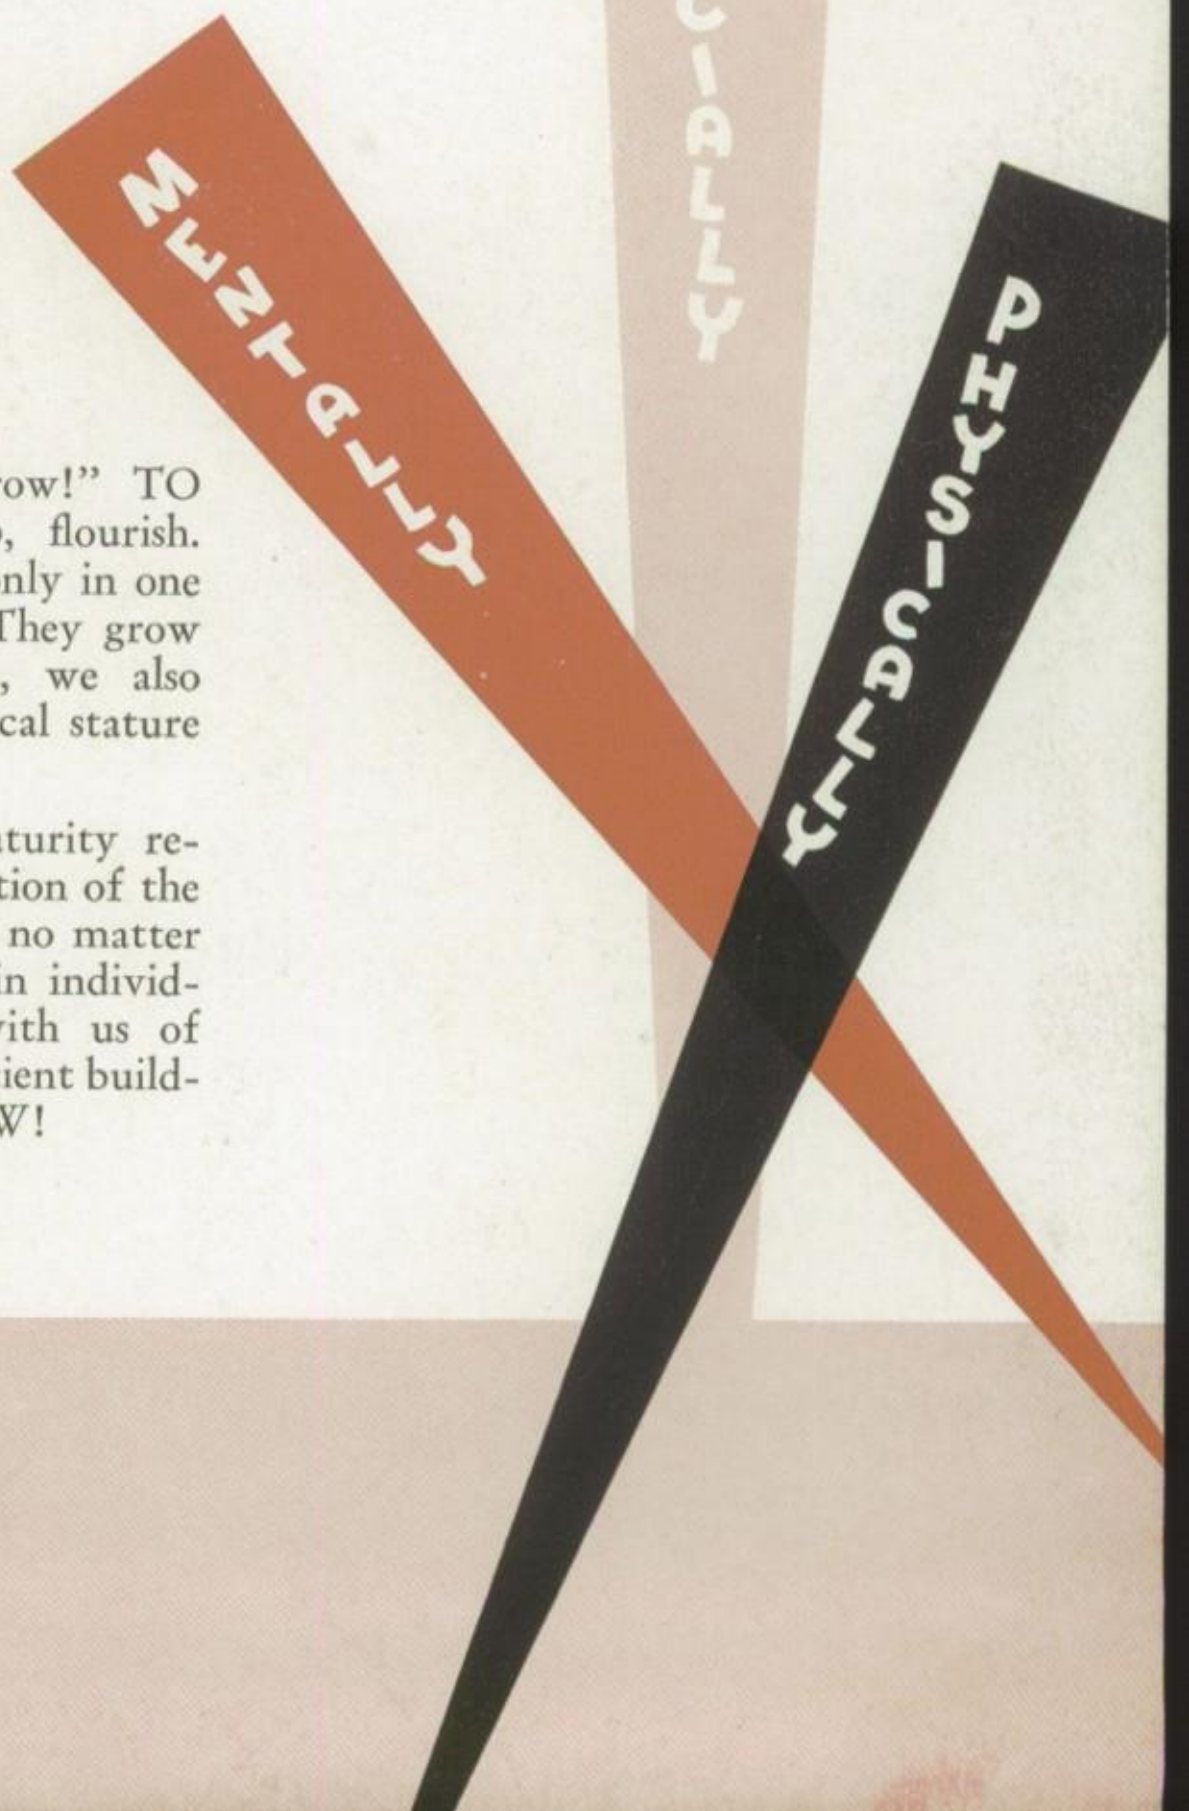
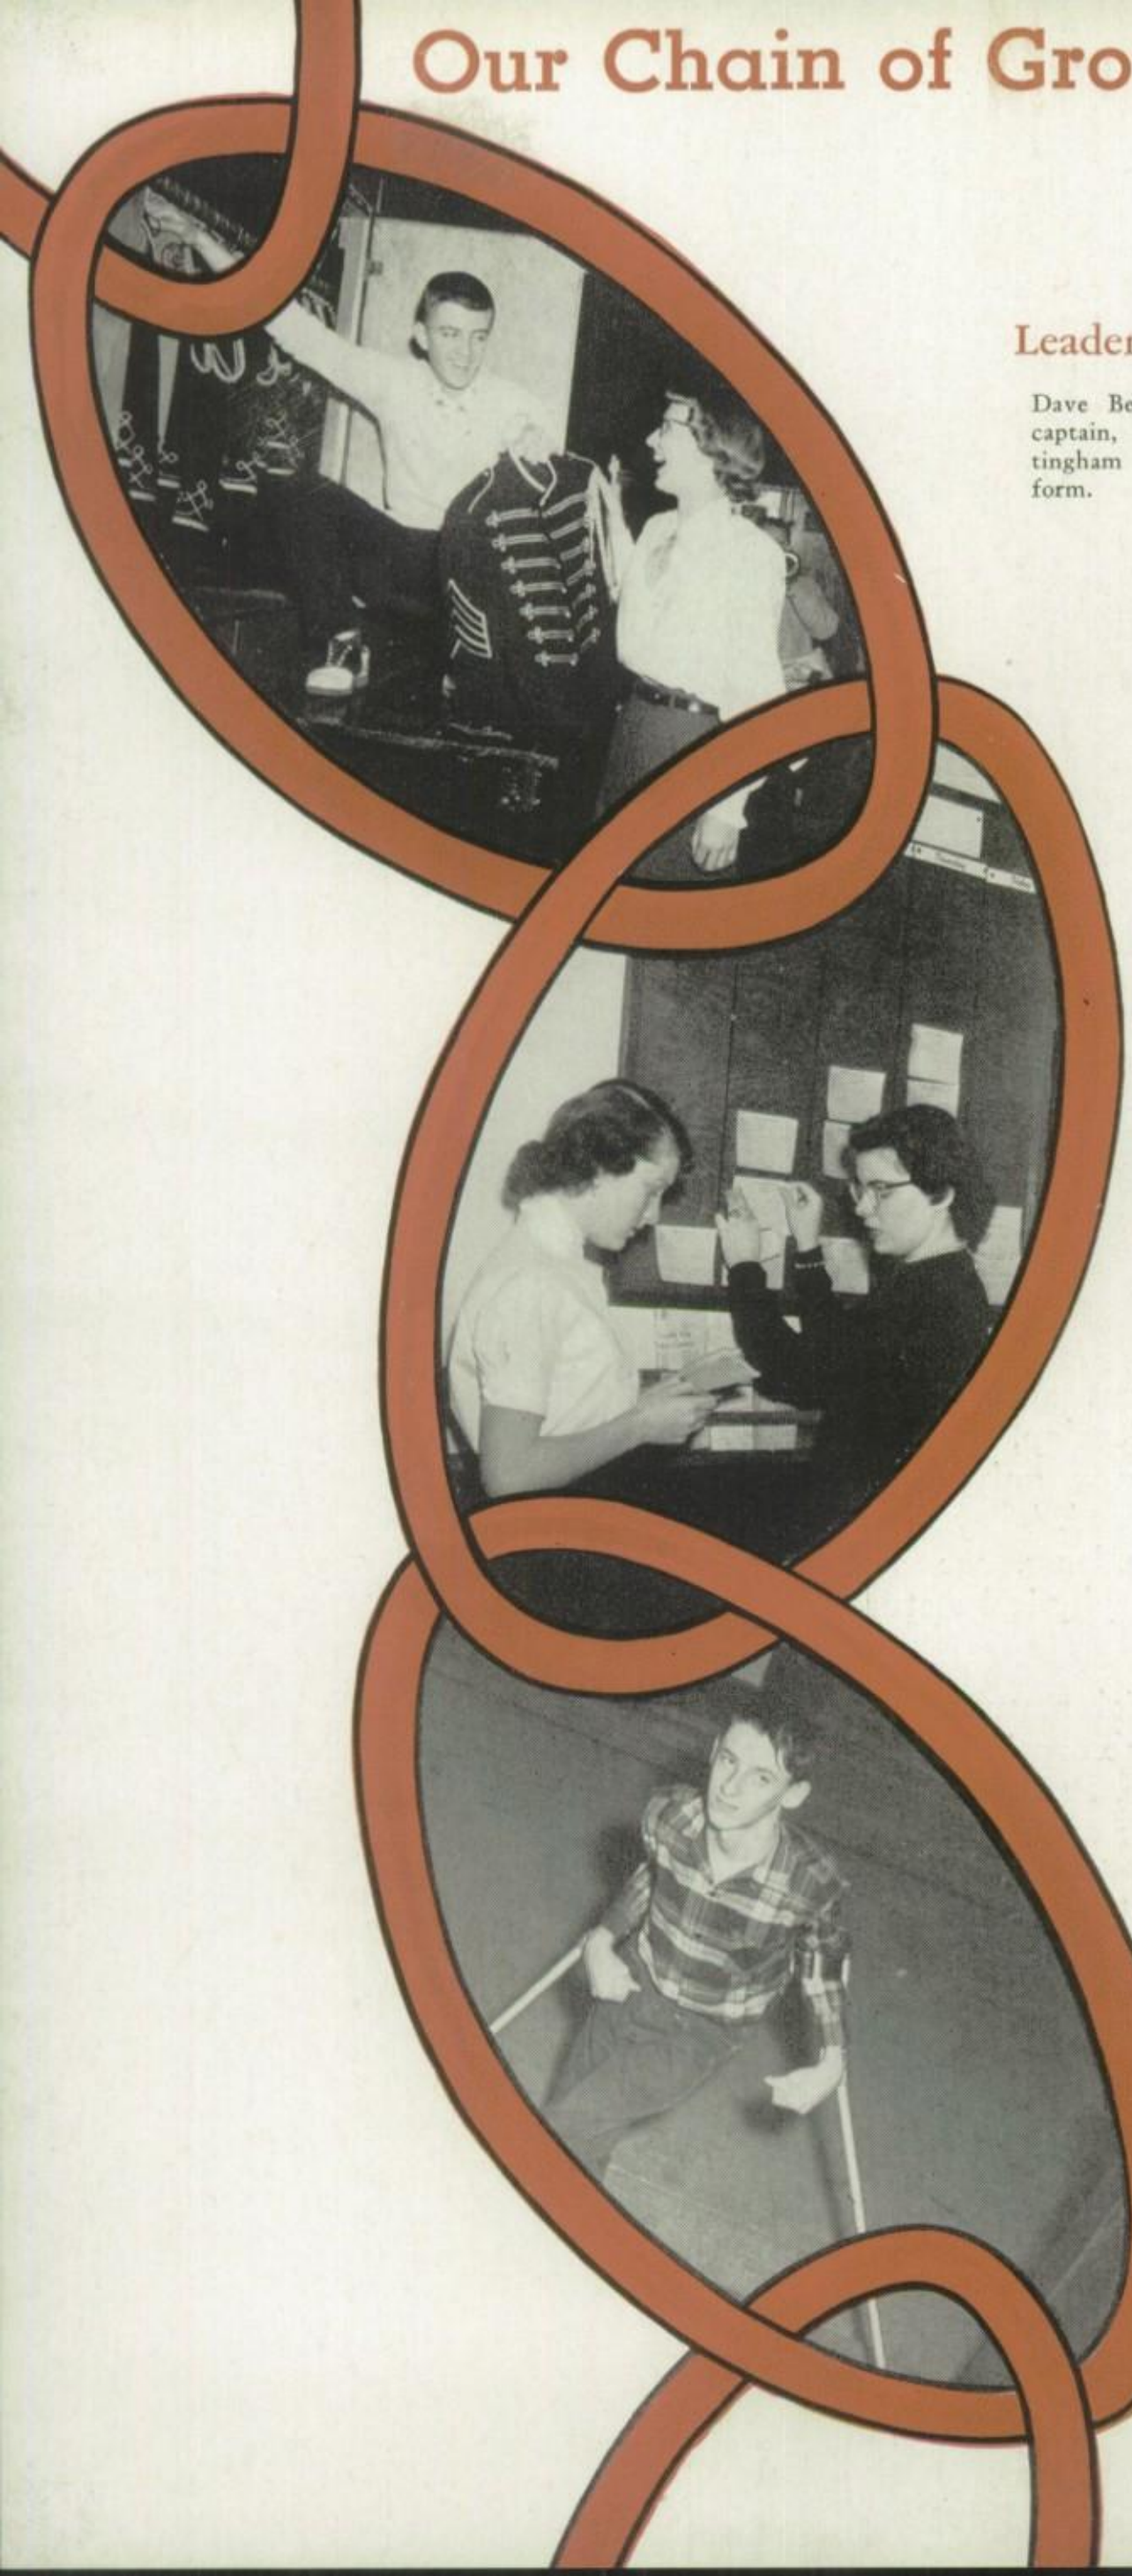
Here We Grow . . .

"Mighty oaks from acorns grow!" TO GROW is to expand, develop, flourish. Plants and lower animals grow only in one way—by their intake of food. They grow mostly physically. As students, we also grow; but it is more than physical stature we attain.

Physical, mental, and social maturity results from our intake and absorption of the opportunities HCHS offers. But no matter what degree of growth we attain individually, memories will remain with us of those pals, our classes, and the ancient building—for it is HERE WE GROW!



Our Chain of Growth



Leadership

Dependability

Friendship

Thrashing of fallen autumn leaves is heard under feet of school-bound students.

Courage

Despite his physical handicap, Larry Saxon ascends stairs to daily classes.

WORLD

Mentally

Whether it is a problem in trigonometry or a problem in shop, it has to be solved. Classrooms and teachers make up the basic part of a scholar's life for the four long—but all too short—years. In preparation for the life ahead each year, students explore new fields as they take one step higher on the ladder of learning to grow mentally.

Pupils grow

mentally by tackling difficult curricula

"What do I want to do when I get out of high school?"

When eighth graders, students have begun to ask themselves this question as they make out tentative programs for the next four years. First they must decide what course they wish to follow—academic (college preparatory), commercial (business), vocational (shops and home economics), or general (a combination of these). All students are required to have two majors, three years in one field, and two minors, two years in one field. One major, no matter what course one chooses, must be English. Other general requirements are one year of science, two years of physical education, American history, civics, economics or sociology, health, and, of course, 32 credits.

Their hands develop many finer skills

"Learn while you earn" was the motto of Diversified Occupations students, who attended school a half day and worked for a local firm the other half. Not only did D. O. prove advantageous because weekly pay checks took care of many school life expenses, but also these workers were able to practice what they learned in school.

Although handicapped by a deficiency in experienced Linotype operators, the print shop boys still produced tickets and programs for various school events, tourney ticket cards, guidance conference booklets, and numerous other printed matter needed by the high school, as well as putting out nine issues of The Inkspot.

Working on opposite sides of the gymnasium were the wood and metal shops. Here students prepared to pursue future vocations or perhaps just to be handy around the house. Wood shop boys made furniture for "Mom" while they were learning about their product. Metal shoppers made tools such as hammers and screw drivers with the help of a newly purchased lathe.

Also looking to the future were the home economics girls as they prepared themselves to be homemakers of tomorrow by learning to cook and to prepare meals for one another and friends at noon. In addition these gals learned to sew and to make their own clothes. Physical education classes built those greatly desired masculine muscles and trim feminine figures, as they also taught co-ordination, sportsmanship, and skill.

They play at contests, parades, games

Senior band twirlers—Anne Perry, Penny Berrier, Sandy Kirkwood, Karen Osborne, Connie Girod, Myrna Ake, and Patty Lanning—directed by drum major Tony Boots, hold a pre-game practice before participating in a football half-time show.

Putting pep in parades, spirit in sports, and class in concerts were the musical-minded senior band instrumentalists under the management of Mr. William Fread, director.

Results of the sectional practices were a "superior" rating in the Bluffton street fair and an "excellent" at the district marching contest. Later 17 of 34 entries in the district solo and ensemble contest rated "superior."

Buttons popped also when band members raised over $700 on Band Tag Day. Winter and spring concerts, a tour to other high schools, and the playing contests, in which the band won "First Division" in state competition, added to another successful year.

30 Choristers entertain

Melody was added to school, civic, and community club programs by the 30 versatile vocalists composing the high school Mixed Chorus, under the supervision of Miss Esther Nesbit. Highlighting the year's activities were approximately 35 public appearances, including a mid-winter concert given in January, the district music contest in March, and a one-day tour to other high schools. Also the Girls' Quartet—composed of Edie Jane Atkinson, LaVerne Shafer, Becky Combs, and Claretta Willmann—was featured at several group performances. Caroling atop a float built by chorus members in the Chamber of Commerce Christmas parade, the vocalists also paraded through the school halls singing favorite Yuletide carols to classmates the day before the annual vacation.

To guarantee perfect performance, sectional practices, in which only one voice group practiced at a time, were held during the noon hour and a four-speed console record player also aided in developing voices. The instrument was purchased by the group last fall, and a music library started.

Bringing out the best from Mixed Chorus tenor, soprano, bass and alto vocal cords is director Miss Esther Nesbit, who tutors nearly 850 students per week. In addition to the Chorus, she also instructs high school glee clubs, junior high classes, and local grade school students. Having served on the school staff 25 years, Miss Nesbit has contributed much to pupils' music appreciation.

In addition to the sufferings endured during the formal initiation, each future member was required to bow to all second year participants.

Clubs for both study and free hours

Studying the minute forms of living organisms under the microscope, dissecting small, unsuspecting creatures, and giving special reports and readings on natural history were highlights at regular meetings held by 28 Nature Study Club members. Fungus, bacteria, and other forms of life too small to be seen by the naked eye, became visible to members with the aid of microscopes, while frogs and fishworms were the victims of group dissections. Reports were given on everything from ants to zebras. Clubbers held a candy sale to finance a subscription to "Nature Magazine," which was the beginning of an available reference file on everything to do with nature. The organization, sponsored by Mr. Robert Anderson, also held an annual Christmas party.

Collecting French sheet music, playing French records, and keeping a bulletin board were devices which French Clubbers under Miss Mabel Fee used to make the language seem real. Financed by a candy sale, a Christmas box was prepared by members for a needy French child. Speaking French, reports of French customs, and singing French songs were features of a Christmas party and other social events.

Besides bringing Caesar to life again, Latin Club members, supervised by Miss Lois Rinsch, originated sock hops and sponsored candy sales which provided funds for the annual Roman Banquet and sent representatives to Latin conventions. Second-year students planned to journey to Chicago to visit well-known museums and the planetarium. Caroling in Latin highlighted the Christmas program.

Stepping down from their roles as instructors, our teachers displayed many talents by public speaking, planning parties, and deciding school issues, as well as being guiding lights for future pedagogues.

A smorgasbord dinner, for example, highlighted an all-city teachers' party held at the Riedman Memorial School in November, under the supervision of Mr. Thomas Hale, president of the Hartford City Teachers' Association. Civic organizations and clubs also invited many of our teachers to speak at meetings.

Practice teaching under the observant and critical eyes of our instructors were students from Ball State Teachers College and Taylor University, as the practice teaching system was renewed after a year's absence.

Three substitutes were necessary to fill in for Mr. James Lurtey during his absence because of rheumatic fever.

To supplement the state retirement benefits, teachers voted to add federal social security by a large margin of 52 to 8. As Hartford City tutors went, so went Indiana.

They plan school routine for pupils

Playing "papa" to nearly 700 students during the 30 hours his children are in school each week, Mr. Myron Clark, principal, helps his family plan programs and courses and performs other duties such as making morning announcements and hiring substitute teachers. Assisting Mr. Clark, having charge of the school's "lost and found" department, handling attendance, and teaching two classes keep Assistant Principal Marion Williamson busy.

Having the added duties of the newest member of the city system, the Parkside grade building, completed last summer, Superintendent E. Phillips Blackburn and board members—Robert Wearly, Keith Wentz, and H. D. Thornburg—planned further expansion of the school city. Other complex problems facing Mr. Blackburn are hiring teachers and keeping them satisfied, choosing new books and courses of study, and distributing the budget. Keeping the books and figures and helping Mr. Blackburn is Executive Secretary Leila Lewis.

Here We Grow

Physically

Football, basketball, baseball, and track keep participants on their toes while on-lookers join in cheering the Airedales and future Dogs on to victory. The added boys' pep club this year, along with the girls', guaranteed the favorites of backing whether they won or lost. Besides extra-curricular physical activity, physical education classes added the much needed exercise to the busy students' schedule, thus enabling them to grow physically.

Team fourth in CIC

Although the Airdale football team was outscored in points, 169-137, it finished the 1955 season with five wins and four losses. The Black and Gold also boasted four wins and two setbacks in Central Indiana Conference play, good enough for the fourth place. Rex Chaney and Bob Reid made the all-conference second team while Jerry Michael earned a berth on the third. Raymond Cline was elected honorary team captain, while Joe Smith, senior halfback, was the top scorer of the 'Dale gridders with six touchdowns and one extra point for a total of 37.

Coach John Carbone considered it a successful season. This is only the second time in his coaching career here that he has had so few seniors—nine, with only six as starters. Fourteen lettermen will be back next year.

Hammond gets 25 of Frosh's 86 points

Frank Teats' squad suffered their first setback since their '52 season when Decatur defeated them by a 14 to 12 score. They previously had a 12 game winning streak before their 13th game. Jesse Hammond was the highest point getter when he garnered 25. Others scoring were Merrill Rhodes with 18, Dave Jones and Bob Fuller with 12 each. Albert Merkle, Ronnie Kemp, and Rex Elliott each hit paydirt once, while Owen Davis was accredited with one point after a touchdown.

Tall Weeksmen win 70% of games

Although Coach Weeks was faced with a rebuilding program this season after losing six lettermen from last year's regional-winning squad, under his skill the Airedales, besides finishing their regularly scheduled season with 12 wins and 6 losses, once again entered the charmed circle by winning the sectional for the fourth year in a row. They eliminated Montpelier, Dunkirk, and Roll to gain a right to play in the regional before being eliminated by Marion in their afternoon game at the regional. Thus the Airedales finished their rebuilding season with an impressive 15-won, 7-loss record. The 1955-56 Airedales were a comparatively tall team, with an average height of six feet, two inches. They ranged in height from six-foot six-inch Bill Grover to five-foot-ten Fred Santilli.

The 'Dale team did not participate this season in the Holiday Tourney at Huntington because Coach Weeks felt the boys needed a rest. Bob Reid led the individual scoring for the season while Raymond Cline finished a solid second. Graduation left seven of the first ten, only Reid, Cline, and Michael making a final exit.

They coach, back the future 'Dales

Coach Jim Lurtey's Junior High basketball boys finished their season with 10 wins and seven losses. This record included the Jonesboro tourney, in which they lost both games. Mentor Lurtey was absent from his coaching position until mid-season, with Frosh Coach Frank Teats taking over his job during this absence. The Junior High team played their best ball during the latter part of the season, when they had a winning streak of seven games. Fred Strine took the scoring honors for the season with 121 points. He was followed closely by Terry Smith with 120. Dave Wagner was next in line with 114 points.

The Frosh team finished the current season with an impressive 12-won, five-loss record. This squad broke the old record of 58 points in one game when they scored 63 against Marion Washington during their final game. Frank Teats' squad won the freshman tourney at Montpelier. Rench was the only player to top the 200 mark in scoring when he scored 208 points for the season. Winger was not far behind with 191. Knox was the only other player to top the 100 mark by scoring 128 points.

Springtime Nine Wins 7, loses 3

Coach Claude Weeks offers last-minute advice and instruction to Gene Gardner, 'Dale swatter, as he selects a bat before making a trip to the plate

The 1955 Airedale baseball team won its first game of the season before dropping two tough ones to Anderson and Marion. They bounced back to win the next six straight, displaying brilliant pitching by Bob Reid. Bob went down in the Sigma-Phi-Gamma hall of fame when he pitched a no-hit ball game against Alexandria.

Airedales break three track records

Last season three more Hartford City High track records were shattered by Carbone's trackmen. To achieve these feats, three 'Dales performed thus: John Knox ran the 220-yard dash in a record time of 22.1 during the Fairmount meet. Ronnie Capper established a new mark of 21.5:6 in the low hurdles during the Alexandria meet. Don Twibell broke the mark of his brother, "Bull," in the shotput during the Montpelier meet with a heave of 47 feet 5½ inches.

The 'Dale thinlies won five dual meets and lost two. They also placed third in a triangular meet with Peru winning and Huntington placing second. Later these thinlies garnered six points in the CIC meet which saw Warsaw win with 49 5/6 points. The scores of the dual meets were as follows: 'Dales 39½, Tipton 69½; 'Dales 55, Fairmount 54; 'Dales 34 1/3, Elwood 74 2/3; 'Dales 59, Alexandria 50; 'Dales 55, Yorktown 54; 'Dales 71, 'Pelier 60; 'Dales 55, Portland 54.

Because of his superior play on the basketball floor, Don Twibell was chosen for the Kiwanis basketball award last year. George Townsend was presented with the Rotary football award, while little Ronnie Capper received the Sigma Phi Gamma track award. Fred Schwaner won the I.O.O.F. award for athletic achievement during his four years in high school.

The Quarterback Club award for mental attitude was given to John Alexander. Bob Reid, the only junior to receive an award, had presented to him the American Legion baseball award. The Dr. Edward Wierzalis award of $100, toward a college education, was given to George Townsend. Bob Carr was the alternate for this award.

Here We Grow

Socially

Frequently over the public address system comes the announcement of a club, committee, or officers' meeting during activity period or after school hours. Extra-curricular activities bring out the personality of a student as salt brings out the flavor of popcorn. Working in clubs, on publications, class plays, and that long-awaited prom also develops personal qualities by experience in cooperating with other students and faculty members so students can grow socially.

This they made of 1956 senior class members Ann Kellogg, Peggy Kile, Judy Burchard, and Joe Burnworth wait their turns as Susan Emshwiller receives Retro payment receipt from Nancy Steinbrunner, Retro business manager.

At the end of the junior year journalists are already planning for the Retro. After discarding many suggested themes, the class of '56 finally chose one from an idea learned at a press conference. During the summer months staff meetings were held, and when school opened in September, the staff found work, work, and more work ahead for the next several months. Deadlines had to be met—at all costs! Pictures had to be taken by the hundreds, and inevitably those last-minute pictures were overexposed, or the photographer forgot to load the camera—and they had to be retaken. Copy had to be written page upon page. Work kept piling up, and even though deadlines were set, it seemed impossible to meet them. Copy editors typed furiously, the business managers attempted to keep the expenditures balanced with the income, and the editors gathered their information. Slowly, one at a time, sections were sent to the engravers until at last all had been sent in. The proofs were returned, were read and reread, to be sure all names were correct and mistakes eliminated. At last the book was sent to the printers and the waiting period began, until we handed our Retro out on class day.

It has been work, laboring under pressure, and meeting difficult deadlines; but under the encouragement and patience of Mr. Edgar Henderson, we've done it. And it has really been a major milestone surrounded with wonderful memories in our high school careers.

They write, photograph, and print news

Got a nose for news? This is one of the basic requirements of those students reporting current events of the high school for The Inkspot.

After a semester of learning to write copy, edit stories, correct proof, pose pictures, and perform literally every other duty of "big time" reporters, Junior journalists took over the paper.

Although hampered by the lack of experienced linotype operators, the policy of printing the paper was continued. And the three to four weeks given the staff to produce "the best paper ever" were briskly spent in finding out what's going on, and especially what will be going on.

From the printing of the September publication to the tourney edition (which was the first paper to print the drawings for the Hartford City sectional), to the last paper, stressing the seniors' activities, it was working against time—but it was wonderful!

Willy fights uselessly with his conscience

"Humans operate just like animals" was the theory of Patsy Fuller (Mary Jo Whitaker), an 11-year-old naturalist who best liked to play in Otto Kirschmeir's (Adolf Ramos) pet shop, when 1955 seniors produced "Cinderella Cottage" last spring. Trying to understand his daughter's speculation was Everett Fuller (George Scott) while also attempting to find a "get rich quick" invention as the family bills kept piling up. The usual breadwinner, Marion Fuller (Anne Mahorney), Patsy's sister, had been stricken with polio and had been left crippled with a marked inferiority complex. Faced with the realization that the Fullers would have to move because they could not pay the rent resulted in Mr. Conkle, the landlord (Bill Steinbrunner), saying "pay up or get out." Patsy, with all her savings, bought tickets on the $18,000 "Cinderella Cottage." Upon hearing she had won the house, Patsy decided to sell it and take the money, so she could help Mr. Kirschmier sponsor operations for Marion in order to marry Jim McKay (Fred Schwaner), a boy from her high school years. After she had found the answer for her problems, Patsy got her Cinderella Cottage.

Ardent animal lover, eleven-year-old Mary Jo Whitaker, fondly cuddles pet skunk in a scene from "Cinderella's Cottage."

The junior play this year, "The Inner Willy," featured Mike Hartman, who appeared as the second self of 16-year-old Willoughby Adams (John McConnaughey), to see if he could "toughen" the second Willy from an "over protected" life with his three maiden aunts (Anna McCollum, Anna Jane Hood, and Gertrude Slater). The Inner Willy promised he would leave the visible Willy as soon as the latter faced up and answered his own problems and stood up to his aunts. For example, Inner Willy tried to help Willoughby get a date for a big social event at school with Carol Martin (Jane Crimmel), a girl in his class whom he greatly admired. Other school friends (Ed Hollander, Bob Thornburg, Diana Lee, Brenda Coe, and Demarus Banter) only added to the perplexing problems of Willoughby's life as Inner Willy tried to unscramble it. But when the curtain fell on the third act, the junior Thespians had straightened out Willoughby's life and Inner Willy had left the scene.

Gliding amid blue moon rays

Dancing dreamily to the music of Jimmy Stier's orchestra under a "Blue Moon," with tiny silver stars sparkling in the deep blue crepe paper sky, were '55 promers. Queen Anne Markin and her escort, Rex Chaney, and their court—Ann Kellogg, Allen Langdon, Myrna Ake, and Joe Whicker—royally led the grand march, which concluded the prom portion of that never-to-be-forgotten night of nights. Taken next to the Hartford Theater for the beginning of the all-night festival, the royal party was the first to be interviewed under the bright lights. After a quiz show and motion picture, the trek back to the school was made, where entertainment, night club style, was provided by the Dixie Land Band from Indiana University. After a quick switch from party clothes to blue jeans, promers regained new strength from a hearty breakfast. The conclusion of the night, which was now morning, came at the country club with square dancing, games, and fun for all.

Marsha Welsh and Dick Pickering are interviewed before entering local theater by Mr. Paul Harrison, as John Gadbury looks on.

(TOP): At the Y-Teen annual formal initiation, club President Kaysa Anderson fills cup of punch for Betty Wade, a new group initiate, while Patty Hawkins waits her turn. The initiation led by club officers brought in 41 new members and consisted of a candlelight ceremony, and a social hour in the home economics room. (RIGHT): Nancy Lord, Therese Guignard, and Georgeann Ravaux are dressed in the required togs for Y-Teens informal initiation held at a home football game. Initiates were made to carry wastebaskets, suck lemons, and bow to all old members.

Plus initiation and regular meetings, Hi-Y'ers sponsored a coke stand at football games and ushered at basketball games and sectional tourney, while Y-Teens held the open-school "Cupid Hop," and raised money through candy sales.

"Deck the halls with boughs of holly . . ." And so they were by the Y-Clubs the week before the Yuletide vacation at the annual "Hanging of the Greens." Civic minded clubbers joined in for the all-school Thanksgiving and Easter programs, sponsored by the Y-Clubs.

Highlighting as well as ending the year's activity was the annual Hi-Y, Y-Teen Spring Banquet held at the high school building in April. At this event, presidents of the two clubs handed over the gavels to the newly elected leaders, and their council and officers stepped down to say, "Another year well done."

grow in social graces

Some things never change. Year after year, the same scenes are seen with new actors playing the parts. As the acorn symbolizes the growth of the oak tree, so are these scenes symbolic of the growth of students.

Since the seventh graders moved to the North Ward, they can be seen daily trudging between their own building and the high school to pursue their curriculum. Prospective art students are found among the eighth graders required to take nine weeks of art a year. Future homemakers learn to wash dishes in the ninth grade, while sophomore students must pass the refresher math test. For that long-awaited prom, juniors hold many fund-raising projects, including selling wrapping paper and running the check room at ball games. Then that last year. The seniors work from September to May on their gift to the school—The Retro. One of the major fund raising campaigns is the magazine sales, with prizes offered for high salesmen of both companies, Crowell-Collier and Curtis.

Next year new faces will take the place of those pictured here—but the scenes will be the same.

They rule student body

Instead of the usual individual drives held throughout the year, the school's governing body, the Student Council, sponsored a school Community Chest Fund, which appropriated money to the charity organizations. Other projects of the Council included continuing the monitor system, sponsoring school square dances, purchasing Bibles for graduating seniors, and planning programs. Also the group planned a celebration honoring the Airedales' sectional tournament victory. Funds for these activities were provided through the profits of the ball game concessions stands.
